Letter To The Editor

November 4, 1974

Dear Editor:

For the past two decades, many American families have been busy building material empires. Values and morals have been sorely neglected. This neglect is being reflected through the actions of adults and young people. Among segments of our society, there is no concept of what is morally right and what is morally wrong, of what is decent and what is indecent.

We, the people of Appomattox County, have been very fortunate to live in this wholesome environment that this county has provided for us. Knowledgable citizens, law enforcement officers, doctors, nurses, and educators can support the fact that our environment is deteriorating.

Athletic events provide one of the major means of entertainment for the citizens of our county. As a spectator, a parent, and a teacher, I was concerned and offended by the misconduct of some spectators at the last game. Obscenities and profanities were shouted to the coaches and players. Children walked up and down the stands throughout the game, instead of waiting until halftime, obstructing the view of spectators.

There are many wholesome, outstanding young people within the county. Our greatest legacy to society can be our youth. It is hoped, now that we have reached our materialistic summit, that the home and the school will endeavor to teach the values and morals which are so essential to a happy and productive life.

Sincerely,
Estaline McCraw

Girl Scouts Express Appreciation

Marion Pinkerton, President of the Virginia Skyline Council, has authorized the sending of an OPEN LETTER on behalf of the Council to the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, thanking him for advocating support of the United Way drives currently ongoing throughout the nation. As stated by Mrs. Pinkerton's letter "Our Council receives a large part of its financial backing from 25 United Ways throughout our jurisdiction of 27½ counties in Virginia, including one in West Virginia.

The Editor of the News
Times Virginian
Appomattox, Va.

Dear Sir:

I would like to take this opportunity to encourage the readers of your paper to write their national Senators and Congressmen concerning the nomination of Nelson Rockefeller as Vice President. This man is no friend of the working man nor a true American, but an internationalist socialist who does not mind seeing your hard earned tax dollars being shared with the Communist, lazy and shiftless here and around the world while he and others like him get richer and richer. We are now facing the greatest danger to our republic than ever before, with an unelected President and a man who has betrayed his party, his nation and is now trying to weasel his way into office under the never before used 25th ammendment, because the people of this nation would not have him at the polls. This will give us two unelected officials in the two highest offices of our nation, which in my opinion will mean disaster to our historic way of life. Be not deceived, this man has his eye on the presidency of this nation and with his power, money and associates, it can be accomplished. If you have not written your representatives before, now is the time to start and simply tell them your opinion. Our two Senators are Harry F. Byrd, Jr. and William L. Scott; Senate Office Building, Washington D. C., 20510. The Congressman for this district is Dan Daniel, House Office Building, Washington, D. C., 20515. Remember, nothing in politics happens accidently and your influence counts, so use it, write that letter today.

I would also like to thank radio station WTTX for the new program that they have started called Liberty Lobby, which is aired at 8 a.m. Monday through Friday, that keeps you up to date on the happenings in Washington that affect you and your future. If you care for your freedom and your nation, you should listen to this informative program and also write your representative often.

GOD, OUR OWN GOD . . . Psalm 67:6

It is strange how little use we make of the spiritual blessings which God Himself, Though He is "our own God," we apply ourselves but little to Him, and ask but little of Him. How seldom do we ask counsel at the hands of the Lord! How often do we go about our business, without seeking His guidance! In our troubles how constantly do we strive to bear our burdens ourselves, instead of casting them upon the Lord, that He may sustain us! This is not because we may not, for the Lord seems to say, "I am yours, come and make use of Me as you will; you may freely come to My store, and the oftener the more welcome." It is our own fault if we make not free with the riches of our God.

Then, since you have such a friend, and He invites you, draw from Him daily. Never want while you have a God to go to; never fear or faint while you have God to help you; go to your treasure and take whatever you need . . . there is all that you can want. He can supply your every need. Let me urge you, then, to make us of your God. Make use of Him in prayer. Go to Him often, because He is your God. Oh, will you fail to use so great a privilege? Fly to Him, tell Him all your needs. Use Him constantly by faith at all times. If some dark providence has beclouded you, use your God as a "sun"; if some strong enemy has beset you, find in God a "shield", for He is a sun and shield to His people. If you have lost your way in the valley of life, use Him as a "guide", for He will direct you. Whatever you are, and wherever you are, remember God is just what you need, and just where you want, and that He can do all you want.

Comment on the International Sunday School lesson for Sunday, November 10, 1974.

Topic: When National Crises Arise.

Scripture: Jeremiah 1: 1-10; 37-38.

Righteousness exalts a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people. Proverbs 14:34.

Jeremiah lived in a time of international crisis. About a century before he began his prophetic ministry (626 B.C.), the northern kingdom of Israel had been conquered and its people exiled by a resurgent Assyria. Before Jeremiah's time, King Manasseh of Judah had begun paying tribute to Assyria, but by the time he began his ministry, Assyrian power was waning. In 625 B. C. Nabopollasar successfully revolted against Assyria and established a new kingdom in Babylonia. In alliance with the Medes, he captured the Assyrian capital, Nineveh, in 612.

King Josiah of Judah seized the opportunity afforded by Assyria's declining strength to reaffirm his nation's independence and to lead a religious revival, which had both spiritual (Josiah was a godly man) and political (showing independence of a foreign power) overtones. The prevalence of idolatrous practices under Manasseh may be attributed, in part at least, to Assyrian pressures, a circumstance which does not lessen the sin of king and people in engaging in them.

Following the capture of Nineveh, Egypt, under Pharoah Neco, entered into alliance with Assyria and sent an army to support the Assyrians in fighting the Babylonians and the Medes. Josiah undertook the block the Egyptian army's march and was killed in battle in 609, defeat which made Judah tributary to Egypt, with Pharoah choosing the kings to rule in Jerusalem.

In 605, Nebuchadrezzar, Nabopolassar's son, defeated the Egyptian army at Carchemish. His father's death prevented Nebuchadrezzar from following up immediately his decisive victory, and Judah became a pawn on the international chess board. Nebuchadrezzar removed Jehoiachin, the Egyptian puppet, from the throne of Judah in 597, replacing him with his uncle, Zedekiah, whom he intended to be his viceroy. But Nebuchadrezzar had taken captive to Babylon the stronger members of the royal family and alder leaders, the best workmen and soldiers lest they lead a rebellion. Zedekiah was left with an influential element in the royal family and among the leadership still friendly and loyal to Egypt. These frustrated his efforts to bring Judah under Babylonian hegemony.

Jeremiah favored acceptance of Babylonian overlordship not only from political considerations but also because God had revealed to him that it was the divine will that Judah come under the rule of Babylonia (or Chaldea). Acknowledgment of Nebuchadrezzar as overlord of Judah was necessary to save the city of Jerusalem from destruction, the land from being ravaged, and the people from being taken into exile. Because the influential princes and leaders favored Egypt and made that Judah's policy, Jeremiah's course and counsel appeared disloyal and treasonable. King Zedekiah seems to have recognized the wisdom and validity of Jeremiah's counsel, but he appears helpless against the Egyptian party.

Because of the wickedness of the people, their acceptance of Assyrian idolatry, and their indulgence in its evil and licentious practices, Judah had taken a course which could lead only to destruction. Disregard of moral and ethical standards leads to individual breakdown and then to the breakdown of society. Thinking to save themselves, the people by large had accepted the idolatrous and evil practices of the Assyrians. In doing so, they destroyed themselves.

God used wicked and pagan people and nations in carrying out His purposes. This does not mean that He approves or that they will escape. The Assyrian which visited God's on the northern kingitself destroyed. Thenina empire which similar role for the kingdom lasted less century. Crowns and perish. God endures, ling reason why He the prime object loyalty.

Jeremiah's faithfulmission, as God's spoka rebellious people, dtes the priority peogive to God. The pown land, which sincerely, were aga the course he advonly way to avoid dand captivity was appear treason. Jvision, proved right was divinely given. Fforsake God lose bland judgment for the

What everyone is afraid to say to tobacco farmers.

"It's been a rough year."
It's as simple as that. Costs are soaring and profits are barely getting off the ground.
At Fidelity National Bank we know enough about farming to realize what kind of a year it's been. And what that's done to your profit margins.
But we also know that no matter how little there is left over from this year's sales, you've got to save as much of it as possible to get you through to next year's. And pay for seed, fertilizer, labor and equipment along the way.
Because we understand this fact—that your financial needs are not like everyone else's—we also understand that not every savings plan is right for you.
And we're ready to show you one that is—with continuous compounding of interest so your money can grow as quickly as you need it to. And full freedom of withdrawal so you can get it when you need it, too.
Fidelity National Bank.
When we say we're out to help you grow, we mean it.
